Dear Sir:

We spoke several weeks ago about your product when you came by the office. I emailed you a few pictures of a tire retail store fire we encountered. To give you a little history about the incident, it had approximately one thousand tires in the warehouse area. This area was located in one end of the structure. We were flowing large amounts of water onto those tires that were burning with very little luck in extinguishing the fire. We decided to use F-500 and induct it at 3%. At this time in about fifteen minutes the fire was under control and the smoke had turned from black to white.

I feel the F-500 used in this application worked well in a confined space. After all was said and done the actual tire count that had burned or started to burn were eight hundred.

You guys keep up the good work
